The 'Copper Route' takes you from the Pubs of Cobar through Canbelego to Nymagee, down to the Lachlan River at Euabalong, across to Mount Hope, and back to Cobar.

The Copper Route

The Copper Route travels through some of Australia's most ambitious and expectant copper and gold mining enterprises and the once-bustling settlements which grew up around them.

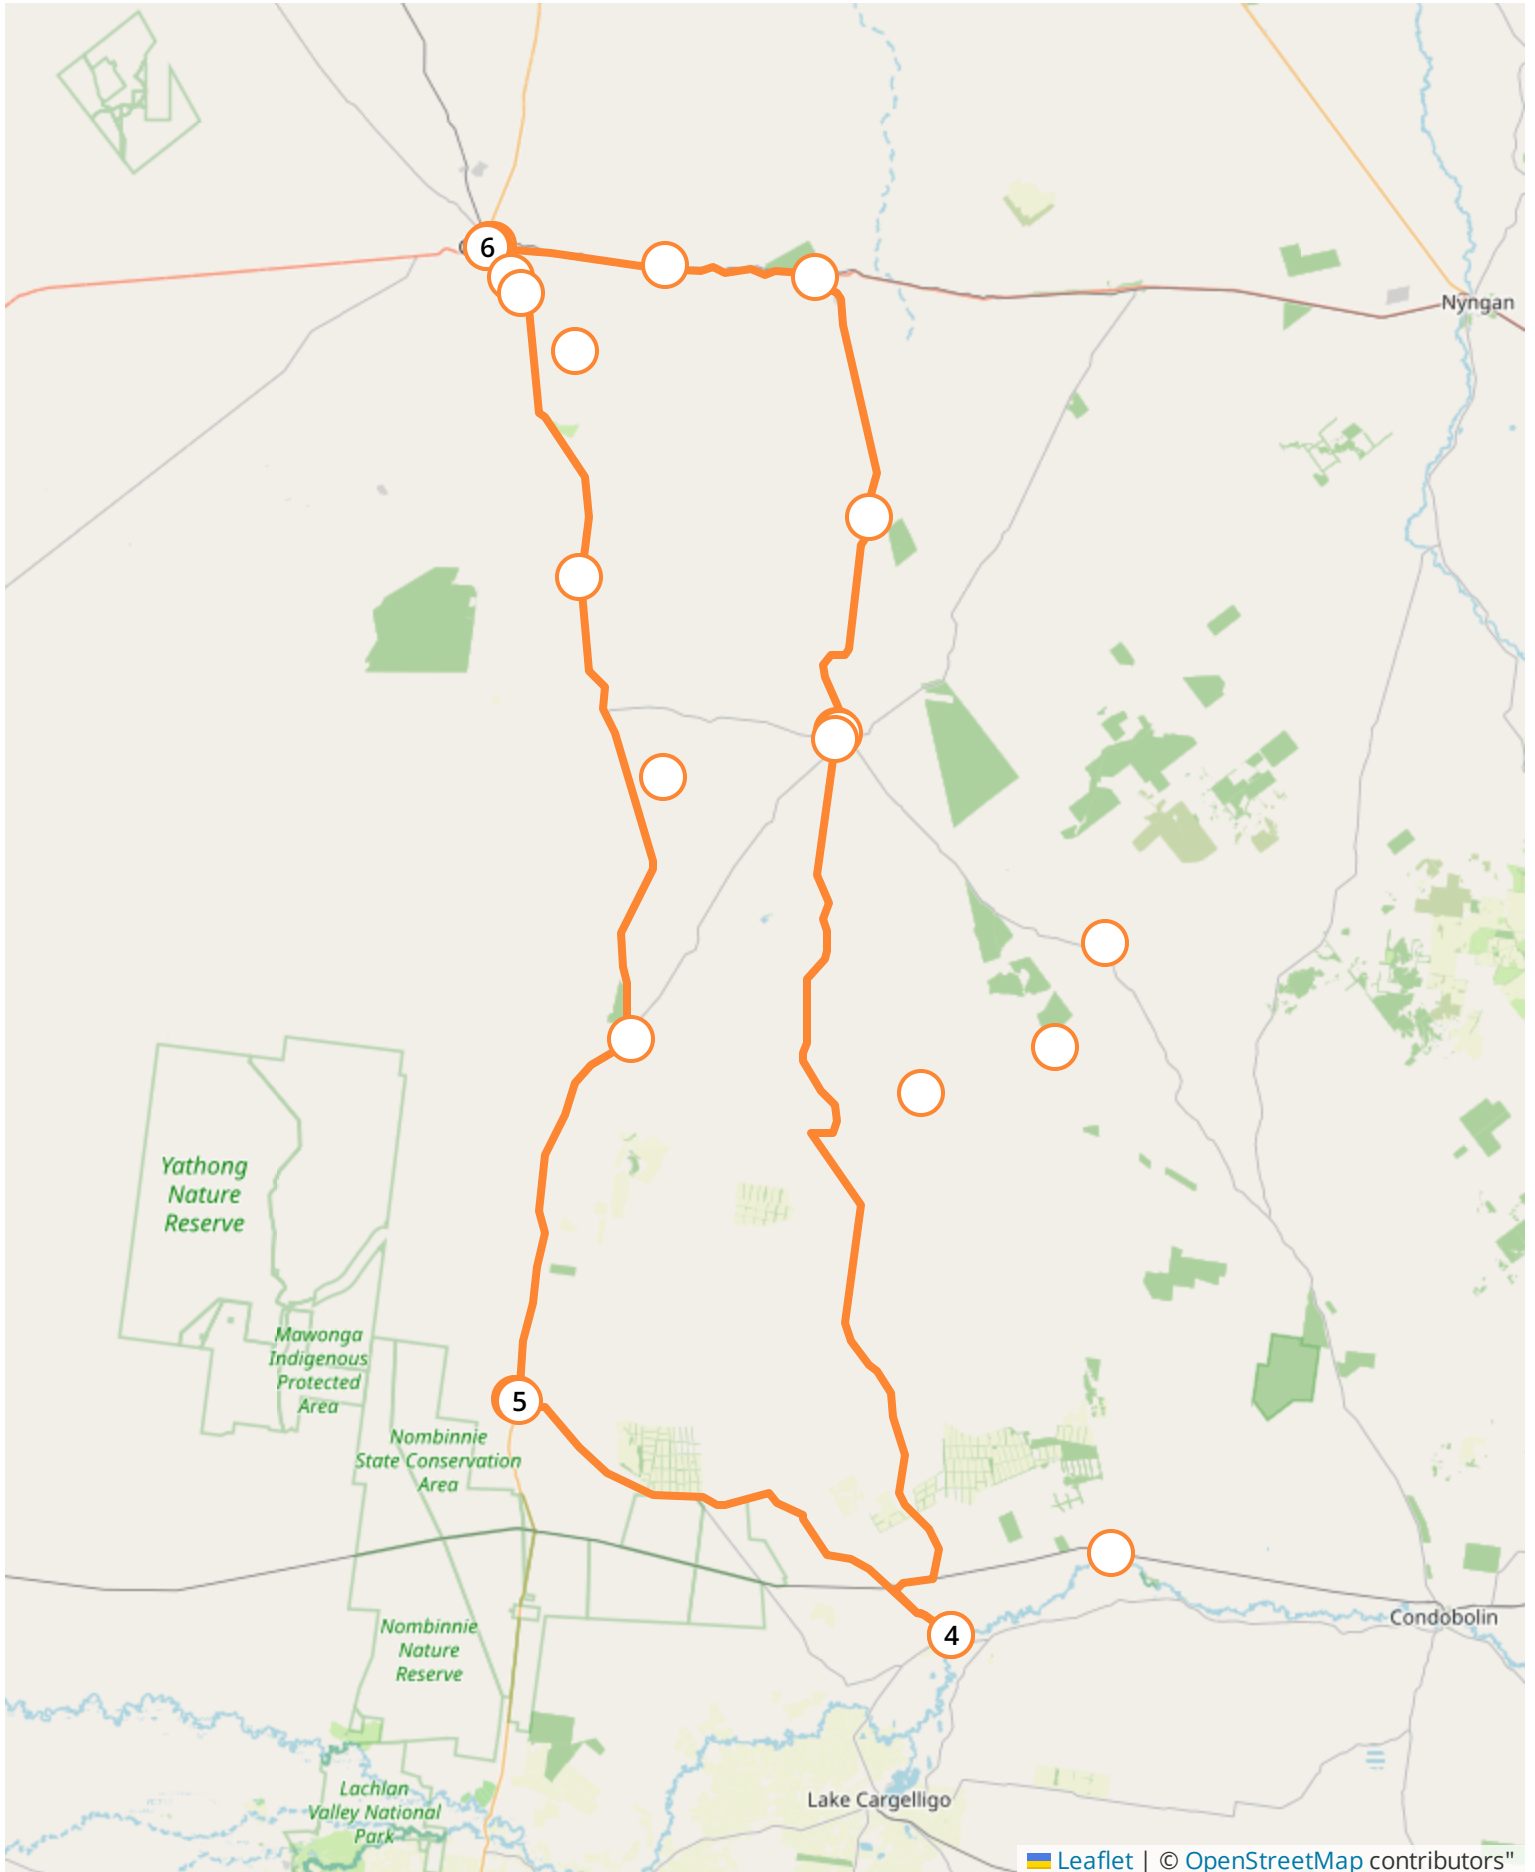

You will visit ghost towns and all-but-abandoned localities, with a few refreshing stops along the way, and of course, historic old pub sites galore. Give some thought to an overnight trip and take in the hospitality at the villages of Nymagee, Euabalong and Mount Hope, where you are guaranteed a cool drink and a good meal.

Check out the farm-stays and camping options available, including beautiful riverside camps on the Lachlan River near Euabalong, and don't forget to take in some of the amazing stories that live in this memorable landscape.

For the less ambitious there's also a 'half loop' option which can be completed in a few hours circling out to Nymagee and back to Cobar on a mixture of excellent gravel, and mostly sealed road.

The Copper Route

1 Cobar

Cobar was once the largest producer of copper in Australia, an industry which spread right throughout the shire, drew thousands of men to undertake the heavy work, and therefore necessitated dozens of watering holes to slake the thirst of a hot and hard working community. The town today pays homage to this history through fascinating museums and colonial buildings, preserved open-cut mines and memorials, with several historic pubs still in operation, and a wonderful legacy of hospitality still on show in the town and surrounding villages.

4 PUB STOP | Empire Hotel

While it no longer features that grand old facade that was the face of the Empire Hotel for so many years, the pub itself is still a welcoming, comfortable and very popular place to eat and drink in Cobar.

8 Nymagee

Nymagee was built on the back of Cornish, Welsh and Scottish miners and mining engineers and the Graham Street reputedly boasted 4 hotels, one on each corner.

11 Bobadah Hotel

Bobadah is not on the most direct route between Nymagee and Bobadah and lies 53 Kilometres South-West of Nymagee. The village was originally called Carpina, as proclaimed on the 3rd November, 1897, but the name never stuck and it was always known as Bobadah, but the little village boasted three hotels.

16 PUB STOP | Euabalong Royal Hotel

Shady river gums line the banks of the Lachlan River, and make a home for corellas, cockatoos and kookaburras in the sleepy village of Euabalong. Nearby, however, the Royal Hotel is far from sleepy, it's a busy, friendly hob for this small community, and is ready to welcome visitors along with locals through its open doors.

18 Historical Pubs & Breweries of Mount Hope

The first of the licensed premises granted for Mount Hope was the Mount Hope Hotel in March 1881, followed by William Clark's Royal Hotel (July), Thomas Saunders' Albion Hotel (August) and John Lees' Commercial Hotel (November 1881). In September 1882 a license was granted to James Lyell for the Great Central Hotel at South Mount Hope. Today, if you pass through the old mining town of Mount Hope, it is hard to believe it once supported a population in the hundreds, several hotels, and a brewery.

19 PUB STOP | Royal Hotel - Mount Hope

Cresting the hill at Mount Hope it's impossible to miss the Royal Hotel, perched on the roadside with large parking bays beside and across the street. The pub features a huge, square bar which feels like an old saloon, and with plenty of Mt Hope memorabilia around the walls you'll soon be back in the hey day of the copper mining boom.

20 Historical Pubs & Breweries of Gilgunnia

The name Gilgunnia literally means 'swamp with Aboriginal huts around it' as there was once a spring in the area, a key resource for traditional owners and of great interest to settlers moving onto their lands. A hotel was established at Gilgunnia in 1873, it's founder envisaged it as a stopping place north of the Lachlan river.

22 Pubs & Breweries of Shuttleton

The township of Shuttleton was founded after copper was discovered there in the late 1890s. The township grew quickly and soon had two pubs, Tattersall's Hotel and the Commercial Hotel. In 1902, it boasted seven stores, including a bakery and a wine shop. Lying a little distance from the town, the Priory Hotel also served the stage coaches and other thirsty travellers.

23 Shearlegs Hotel

The Shearlegs Hotel is another site that lives only in memory, and is almost certainly located at or near the current location of the pastoral property 'Shearlegs'.

 Leaflet | © OpenStreetMap contributors

24 Bee Mountain Hotel - Illawong

As so often happened, the development of mining led to the development of a village. The scatter of houses and businesses at Bee Mountain, serving the Queen Bee and other small mining ventures, was proclaimed a village in 1906 with the name Illewong bestowed upon it.
